Rotary Founded by Paul Harris in Chicago in 1905

It was Paul Harris, the "Father of Rotary," who founded the first Rotary Club in Chicago in 1905. Harris was a young man of 25 when he started the club, and he was only 35 when he died. He was a man of great vision and energy, and he was a man who believed in the power of service. He was a man who believed that every man has the potential to be a leader, and he was a man who believed that every man has the potential to be a servant.

FOUNDER OF ROTARY — The late Paul P. Harris, an attorney, organized the first Rotary Club in 1905 in Chicago. The name of the club was derived from the fact that the organization consisted of a circle of 30 local business men.

The club was founded in Chicago in 1905, and it was the first of many clubs that would follow. Harris was a man of great vision and energy, and he was a man who believed in the power of service. Four Separate Concepts of Service Are Included in Program of Rotary

The program of service activities for Rotary is a broad one. It includes the four separate concepts of service which are the foundation of the organization.

These are: service to our community, service to our country, service to our world, and service to our fellow man.

The development of these four separate concepts of service is the result of the growth and expansion of the organization.

Service to our community is the first and most important concept. It is the foundation upon which all other service is built.

Service to our country is the second concept. It is the result of our participation in the affairs of our nation.

First Rotary Steps Were Taken During a Stroll Through Chicago Park by Founder Paul Harris

It was a stroll through Chicago Park that marked the beginning of the Tullahoma Rotary Club. Paul Harris, the founder of the club, led a group of men in a walk through the park in 1922. The group was made up of men from various professions and backgrounds. They met regularly and discussed ways to improve the community. This led to the formation of the Tullahoma Rotary Club in January 1922.

The club's first meeting was held in a room at the Tullahoma Hotel. The members discussed the club's purpose and goals. They decided to focus on service to the community and promoting good will. The club's motto is "Service Above Self." The club has since grown and now has over 100 members.
